

When we meet with newly divorced women, we get a great opportunity to see people come from where they have a lot of concerns and we can work with them through their life changing events to know that they will be empowered and that they will be okay at the end. It's a great opportunity for us to be able to share the journey with you when you're going through something that we know is very difficult. Do we have enough money to live on? Do we have money for your kids for school? Are you going to be able to invest the way you want to and be okay with what's going on in your life? What brings me joy and satisfaction in my job is knowing that I have the ability to move people from some of their most difficult times in their lives and see their empowerment and their ability to live the financial life that they've always wanted.
